

A little more than two years ago our house on Jackson Ridge Drive, Reynolds Plantation was completed. Walking in the first time the previous 9 months of construction came to light. Everything came together with the results "that pictures do not do it justice!"

We followed an organized process when we decided to build. The fall before we broke ground we interviewed various builders. We were looking for a builder that was organized so that we could build and make a minimum amount of trips to Georgia. We needed someone that would communicate to us on a regular basis via phone and smart phone pictures of the progress. We were looking for a contractor that was not only a "foreman" but was a hands-on builder. On hands knowledge was also important to us. We were also looking for someone that would be able to help us design our dream house to be uniquely ours. DreamBuilt fit the requirements from the start.

We live in a suburb of Milwaukee, Wisconsin. We wanted to be involved in the process of picking out the cabinets, granite, plumbing fixtures, electrical fixtures, flooring, carpeting, appliances siding, tile for the kitchen and baths, paint and even door knobs and drawer pulls. It was important that when we did come for a visit, appointments were scheduled so that our time was used wisely. We came to make selections 4 times. Each time Ann organized our meetings with the vendors so that we even had time to play golf and meet some of our new neighbors. Paige and Ann could have picked out all of this for us. We did see the models that they built. They were beautiful homes. But we wanted a house that was ours. The selection of everything was done in approximately 8 days at three separate trips. When we walked into the completed house we could not believe that we put this all together!

We broke ground, March 2008. As the bulldozers were clearing the lot, the basement was dug and the cement was being poured Derek was there to take and send pictures to us. In fact, he was there for to supervise (and take pictures) for every stage of building. Derek was there for us to help make construction decisions. He was there to advise us on the surface of our decks. We had a special project in our house. We have a golf simulator over our garage. There were specific dimensions in order that the simulator could be installed correctly. Derek oversaw the project to the very end.

After the construction was over and we were settled in our beautiful home DreamBuilt was there to make things right. The house settled and there was a crack in the wall. It was repaired before we knew it. Good as new. Our brand new washing machine that was only used 10 times required major serving on the day before Thanksgiving. Ann was able to get us a new one delivered. I know even now if I have a question or need advice I can count on their help. They stand behind their work.

Honesty and integrity are the attributes that you look for when you trust someone with the project of building your home. This is DreamBuilt.

Peter and Pattie Chapman
March 1, 2011